One of the people in the town went to the police station. He met the policeman and asked him, “Did you catch a black and white dog a week ago?”

“Yes, I did,” said the policeman.

“Please give the dog to me,” said the man. “Many people like him”

“We kept the dog for seven days,” said the policeman. “So the dog’s^{*1} master should pay seven^{*2} shillings. Then we will return the dog to his master.”

“I won’t pay because I’m not the dog’s master,” said the man.

“Very well,” said the policeman. “We’ll keep the dog for three more days, and we’ll kill him.”

The children in the town were sorry when they heard the news. Some of them stood in front of the^{*3} railroad station and collected money. They collected enough money.

The next morning the children went to the police station. They met the policeman and said to him, “Here is eight shillings. Please give^{*4} Bobby to us.”

“No,” said the policeman. “A dog’s master should be a^{*5} grownup. We can’t give a dog to children.”

“But,” said one of the children, “Bobby’s master is dead. We’ll take care of Bobby.”

“I’m sorry for Bobby,” said the policeman, “but we can’t change the^{*6} law.”

“How can we save Bobby?” asked another child.

“I don’t know,” said the policeman.

Then the children went to the^{*7} town office and said to the^{*8} mayor, “We went to the police station, but the policeman didn’t listen to us. How can we save him?”

“I can do something for him,” said the mayor.

He went to the police station and saw the^{*9} police master.

“Many people in our town like Bobby very much,” he said. “We are going to give^{*10} a key of honor to the dog. Then he will be a^{*11} citizen of this town.”

In this way the children saved the^{*12} homeless dog.
